FSU's Global Citizenship Certificate Fosters Global-Ready Graduates

FSU's Global Citizenship Certificate prepares students for the new challenges of living and working in an increasingly globalized world by providing opportunities for learning both inside and outside of the classroom. The certificate requirements include four academic courses, a sustained international or intercultural experience, and attending eight or more intercultural events.

The certificate helps students develop a global mindset and gain an understanding of global issues and an increased awareness and appreciation of cultural differences resulting in the confidence to interact successfully in a diverse workforce.

FSU senior Chanelle Dupuis said that she now better understands other cultures and learned how to become a global citizen. "I was exposed to many new ways of thinking and new perspectives on the world," Dupuis said. "I believe this exposure has shaped me as an individual and helped me in my research and other classes."

Dupuis studies French and Spanish, and her research about endangered languages in Brazil and Ecuador was recently published in Amazônia Latitude, an international, environmental humanities publication. She started this project in Fall 2018 during the certificate's capstone course, in which students develop individual research projects using theories and concepts learned throughout the certificate. Students then present their projects at the FSU Undergraduate Research Symposium or Fall Research Day.
