Submit a Video to GradWorld FSU, Reach the World

Take advantage of the opportunity to showcase your research and join FSU’s community of global scholars by broadcasting your research through GradWorld FSU.

GradWorld FSU is an interactive mapping website that uses personalized video presentations to highlight the extraordinary work of FSU graduate students, postdocs, alumni, and faculty.

Since its launch in 2017, over 300 videos have been posted to GradWorld, representing over 35 countries and 72 different degree programs. The database is sortable by college/unit, degree program, degree level, country, and language. Acknowledgments are also now given to the funding agencies as well.

Wang Min, Ph.D. candidate studying International and Multicultural Education, presented her research on educational inequality in rural China. “Developing the video with GradWorld has helped me learn to communicate my research to a more general audience, and I really appreciate the opportunity to share,” Min said. “Since the video was made public, I have received many positive comments from a range of audiences on my research, such as friends, mentors, and colleagues, which motivated me to continue doing the research with quality and rigor.”

Maggie Ng

Global Exchanges Student

Bachelor's in Marketing & Management Information Systems

Maggie Ng, Marketing and Management Information Sciences double major, completed her Global Exchange at the University of Sussex in Brighton, England in spring 2020.

Before departing, Ng said, “I’m really excited to travel to European countries and learn about the history of the places I go. I’m looking forward to challenging myself academically and socially, but I also can’t wait to try all the different foods!”

As an exchange student, Ng was able to grow as a person stating that naturally, “I’m not a very independent person, and I wanted to challenge myself and experience living in a foreign country on my own. I wanted an opportunity where I could learn new things and grow mentally while having fun at the same time.” Upon completing the program, Ng recalled that her Global Exchange made her more independent and more confident doing things on her own. Ng said, “I think overall I’ve gained a lot of self-growth from this experience.”

Global Exchanges allowed her the opportunity to not only work on herself now, but also expand on her opportunities in the future. “As for my future career path, living in another country during the exchange has made me want to find jobs that have international offices and will allow me to work abroad,” she said.
